

Response to final editor comments: Monitoring the temperature dependent elastic and anelastic properties in isotropic polycrystalline ice using resonant ultrasound spectroscopy

Matthew J. Vaughan¹, Kasper van Wijk², David J. Prior¹, and M. Hamish Bowman¹

¹Department of Geology, University of Otago, 360 Leith Walk, Dunedin, New Zealand, 9054.

²Department of Physics, Building 303, University of Auckland, 38 Princes Street, Auckland, New Zealand, 92019

Correspondence to: Matthew Vaughan (mattvaughan902@gmail.com)

1 Introduction

2 Response To Editor Comments: Prof. Eisen

- Comment: ‘I wonder if you find a more appropriate "second choice" term than Antarctica, as your results apply to basically every piece of ice.’

5

Response: Thank you, Prof. Eisen, for taking the time to make a final review of our manuscript. We have reworded the introduction slightly to be less specific, now including temperate mountains glaciers and the Greenland Ice Sheet.